Villager Johan Chrol prepares to welcome visitors to the Rosenbach.

Touring the Rosenbach, a Book Lover’s Dream, with Johan Chrol

By John T. Gillespie

Where but amid a setting of unmatched elegance and stateliness might one expect to find the collected works – in some cases original manuscripts and first editions – of John Bunyan, Geoffrey Chaucer, Herman Melville, Lewis Carroll, Joseph Conrad, Charles Dickens, L. Frank Baum, Edgar Allan Poe, James Joyce, and myriad other famous authors?

The Rosenbach Museum and Library at 2008 Delancey Street is a bibliophile’s dream. New York may have its Grolier Club, San Francisco its Roxburghe Club, St. Louis its Bixby Club, and Minneapolis its Ampersand Club. But the Rosenbach alone matches a historic book collection with an assemblage of decorative arts and priceless furnishings from around the world. The 20 foot ceilings and expansive rooms in this once private home add to the experience and grandiloquent setting. Here and there can be seen a Gilbert Stuart.

And guiding visitors with a curator’s knowledge is East Falls Villager Johan Chrol, who joined the Rosenbach eight years ago as a volunteer docent.

Johan will host a tour for East Falls Villagers on April 20. Given the relative intimacy of the setting, expect a close-up, personalized visit. After eight years Chrol is a master of detail. During a recent tour by a group of collectors, called the Questers, from outside Philadelphia, Johan kept up a running dialogue, punctuated with frequent questions from visitors.

Village To Co-Sponsor “Death With Dignity” Forum March 26

By Phil Hine

EFV, Weavers Way, Northwest Village Network, Ralston My Way, and Mt. Airy USA will co-host a forum on the choices facing the dying and terminally ill Sunday, March 26, from 3pm to 5 pm at 1st United Methodist Church of Germantown, 6001 Germantown Ave.

The forum is part of an ongoing series dealing with the challenges confronting the elderly, their families and caregivers. It originated with a panel discussion inspired by Being Mortal, Atul Gawande’s book on the mixed blessings of medicine’s role in steps to prolong life. The book by the noted surgeon and health issues commentator has become a catalyst for public discussion.

The forum will feature a speaker from Compassion and Choices in Philadelphia, who will discuss pending legislation in Pennsylvania on personal rights and choices for death with dignity, and Barbara Mancini, who will offer her perspectives, based upon a compelling personal story, concerning the legal issues that stand in the way of making life and death choices.

Rosenbach

Photos are permitted in the museum, including rooms with rare book collections but not the traveling exhibits. Because of age and condition, not all books or manuscripts are on display. That would include Chaucer's 14th century Canterbury Tales.

The Rosenbach was founded in 1954 through a gift by Dr. A.S.W. Rosenbach (1876-1952) and his brother, Philip (1863-1953). Renowned dealers in books, manuscripts, and fine art, the brothers played a central role in the development of private libraries that later became our nation's most important public collections of rare books, such as the Folger and Huntington Libraries.

The brothers' own personal collection, now the core of the Rosenbach, features treasures the brothers were unable to part with, including the only surviving copy of Benjamin Franklin's first Poor Richard's Almanac and the manuscript of James Joyce's Ulysses. The collection has since grown to include the papers of poet Marianne Moore, and Bram Stoker's notes for Dracula, adding richness and relevance to the experience of visiting the Rosenbach.

Chrol conducts tour in rare book library.

Thursday, April 20

Carpool from the Library at 10:30.

Registration Required
(267-444-4507). $8 fee at the door.

The greater part of the house is furnished much as the Rosenbach brothers lived in it. The furniture is mainly 18th-century English with notable examples of the work of Chippendale, Adam, Hepplewhite and Sheraton.

Village Movement Is 15; Celebration Postponed

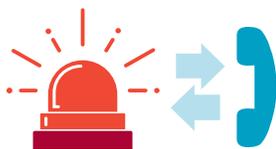

By Mary Flournoy

Boston's Beacon Hill Village, the first retirement-in-place community, turned 15 in February. To mark the occasion, its leaders had intended to celebrate the nationwide Village movement – now grown to 350 communities – February 13 until severe snow storms in New England forced postponement. A live broadcast with Dr. Atul Gawande, author of best selling Being Mortal, will be rescheduled. One hundred and sixty five Villages had been prepared to host watch parties as far away as the Virgin Islands.

East Falls Village, Penn's Village in Center City, and Northwest Village Network cancelled what was to have been a joint watch party at the Parkway Central Library. Almost 230 people had registered for the event not just village members, but people from the region – from New Jersey to King of Prussia – who are interested in the Village or are admirers of Dr. Gawande's work. Erin Arvedlund wrote about the event in the Inquirer.

(To read the article, see eastfallsvillage.com.)

Due to Dr. Gawande's busy schedule, the event may not be rescheduled until early fall. Stay tuned...

RAND Plans Emergency Preparedness Survey

By Phil Hinline

East Falls Village is collaborating with Village to Village Network, the Centers for Disease Control & Prevention, and AARP, to develop guidance for handling emergencies – both individually and collectively.

As a result, most Village households will soon receive, if they haven't already, a call from ISA Research (Interviewing Service of America) with some questions about emergency preparedness. The survey is a project of the RAND Corporation which is seeking practical answers on how best to respond to emergencies homeowners may face. Homeowners may opt out of the survey via e-mail or at the time of the call. Those who choose to participate in the brief survey will receive a $20 cash gift card. If 50 households participate, East Falls Village will receive $500.

The information will help guide individual actions and arrangements for mutual support among members in emergencies in keeping with RAND's mission of developing solutions to public policy challenges and making communities safer throughout the world.

Good Reads

Bobby Kennedy, The Making of a Liberal Icon

by Larry Tye

Review by John T. Gillespie

Bobby Kennedy died at 43, leaving a mountain of might-have-beens and promises unfulfilled. Among unanswered questions were those dealing with character. Was he “bad” Bobby or “good” Bobby? The ruthless Machiavellian and political enforcer or a true man of conscience? Larry Tye comes down in favor of the latter and many posthumous judgments agree. This son of privilege and strict Catholic morality, who worked for the Communist-baiting Joe McCarthy and led a vengeful years-long pursuit of Jimmy Hoffa so that it was said “He made people feel sorry for Jimmy Hoffa,” was a civil rights convert and conscience of the poor by the time he ran for the Senate in 1964. McCarthy was dead and the Justice Department’s “Get Hoffa Squad” would soon be a memory. Bobby Kennedy stands for an idealism that links political office with service to others. Whether remembered as “liberal icon” or “a good and decent man, who saw wrong and tried to right it” in the words of his brother Ted’s funeral eulogy. Kennedy inspired hope and confidence at a time that, arguably like today, were in short supply.

The Romanovs

By Simon Montefiore

Review by Margaret Sadler

Most of us are familiar with Catherine the Great and Peter the Great and the tragic end of the Romanov dynasty, but you are missing all the political intrigue, European royal cross marriages, abundant sex scandals, murder, death and mayhem in courtly life all in full view in this epic history. Mother Russia held her sons and daughters (many related to Queen Victoria) in a tight hold of loyalty to Emperor, Church and country. The first Romanov – Michael I – came to power in 1613 and the last – Nicholas II – in 1894. The family tree includes the greats and the not-so-greats and all the powerful men and women that led to Russia’s collapse and rebirth. Montefiore is a historian who makes history talk to the reader.
